FOLDS of HONOR

The Responsibility of Self Defense

After a recent move to Colorado, I procrastinated for several weeks before enrolling in a local concealed carry course. Like anything else that involves interacting with and forking over money to state or federal governments—whether that's the DMV, county clerk or DNR equivalent—I'm usually less than enthusiastic about the ordeal. What finally got me off the schlide was, a bit unexpectedly, my wife. "If our Second Amendment right is the responsibility you say it is," she graciously reminded me, "then we've got to take that seriously. I signed us up for a concealed carry class this Saturday." Well, how do you like them apples? She'd done her own independent research on state laws, found a certified class and signed us up. This is from the woman who, until recently, had never fired a gun in her life.

We turned the class and following afternoon into a date. We went out for lunch and talked at length about training, firearm selection and practical solutions for everyday carry. Finally, I asked her where her interest in firearms and self defense had come from. "You know," she said, with a smile, "I do read your magazine. It's not that I was ever against concealed carry, I was just never exposed to it. I didn't know anything about guns, so I was afraid of them."

In most places in America, we have a tremendous right and responsibility to self defense. But it means we have to take advantage of the opportunity, make the most of state laws and take ownership for our training. Sign up for a carry course, fill out the paperwork, and get the training you need to be a well informed, well trained and armed citizen.

These pages are filled with expert advice and reviews on the best guns and gear to help you effectively defend yourself. There's never been a better time to build your skill, add to your gun collection or sign up for a training course near you.

RUGER® LIGHTWEIGHT, COMPACT HANDGUNS
PERSONAL PROTECTION FOR RESPONSIBLE CITIZENS

RUGER® COMPACT HANDGUNS

Ruger offers lightweight, compact handguns for every personal protection need.

380 AUTO LCP® CUSTOM

Designed with the shooter in mind, the Ruger® LCP® Custom is affordable, comfortable and perfect for licensed carry for personal protection, or as a backup firearm for law enforcement.

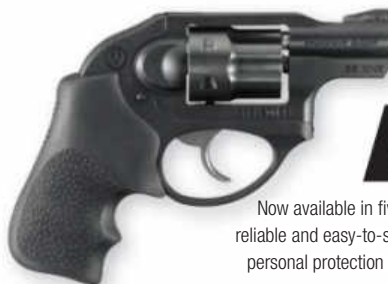

9MM LUGER LC9S®

Chambered in 9mm Luger and sized just slightly larger (less than 1" taller and 1" longer) than the LCP®, the LC9S® is compact, powerful and features a short, light, crisp trigger pull for faster shooting and improved accuracy.

380 AUTO LC380®

The LC380® provides 7+1 rounds of effective .380 Auto personal protection. Slim and lightweight for easy concealment, the LC380® combines reduced recoil with modern safety features in an easy-to-rack design.

22 LR, 22 WMRF, 38 SPL +P, 357 MAG, 9MM LUGER LCR®

Now available in five calibers, there is a lightweight, reliable and easy-to-shoot LCR® for every need – from personal protection to low-cost practice at the range.

Quick Shot: Blackhawk Ultralight Side Zip Boot

Footwear may be one of the more overlooked items of gear among shooters of all disciplines and experience levels. Whether a shooter spends his or her time in competition, at the range or in the field, footwear should always be a key consideration and tailored to the particular task at hand. The new Ultralight Side Zip Boot from Blackhawk is a great multi-purpose choice that's also quick to take on and off courtesy of an easy-to-use YKK Coil Zipper on the boot's side.

The boots feature a tough CORDURA upper as well as a durable and grippy Vibram outsole for extreme use. They also sport a long-lasting, water-friendly PU midsole; a fully gusseted tongue; a Dri-Lex moisture-wicking inner lining; and an OrthoLite washable, antimicrobial custom-molded footbed.

I had the chance to test the Ultralight Side Zip Boot at an event in Montana and for several months afterward. The event involved a little bit of running and gunning as well as more general use, and through it all the boots performed admirably. They were supremely lightweight, comfortable and allowed for excellent maneuverability. Sweating was also never an issue given the Dri-Lex inner lining and OrthoLite footbed.

The Ultralight Side Zip Boot is available now for $178.95. The boots come in either Black or Desert Tan and are available in a variety of sizes for men and women. GDTM

BE A GUNSMITH!

Get your FREE introductory video gunsmithing lesson and complete information package today!

Study at home and TURN YOUR PASSION INTO PROFIT!

Quickly learn the step-by-step secrets of how to make money gunsmithing part-time, full-time, or as a retirement income.

Currently there is a HUGE Demand for Gunsmiths.

Millions of guns need fixing. Most of the old-time gunsmiths have retired and haven't been replaced because previously there wasn't a cost effective way to quickly train individuals to become gunsmiths and help them make money fast. This has created a chronic shortage and a huge opportunity for you.

Gunsmithing is a recession-proof business. Even in tough times people spend money to get their guns repaired or professionally cleaned. It's a lot cheaper than buying a new one and they still want and need them for hunting and self defense. You can even work part-time right from your home. Your one time investment in the course could provide you with a lifetime of income and opportunity.

Here's what you will learn in your FREE VIDEO!

How AGI's Professional Gunsmithing Course changed Robert Briskey's life: "Within one short year I opened up my own firearms repair and custom refinishing shop. My business is exceeding my dreams. The freedom I enjoy being self-employed is priceless. Without the opportunity that AGI's course offered, my dream would be just that, a dream." Robert T. Briskey, Battle Hen Armory

You don't have to wait to start gunsmithing! It only takes a relatively small investment to get started. As soon as you begin watching the videos you will be able to start making repairs. Anytime you run into a problem, you just pop in the DVD on the subject or model gun that you need information on and do a quick review.

Couldn't get a better recommendation: "I made the mistake of taking another cheaper gunsmithing course. I knew I made a mistake when I read in one of my lesson books that for further instructional help, go to the AGI website and get a DVD on the subject. When other schools are giving YOU that kind of acknowledgement, then you have to be the best." Gordon Fisher

In this FREE introductory video gunsmithing lesson featuring renowned Master Gunsmith Robert "Bob" Dunlap you WILL learn:

- How to ensure reliable auto-pistol feeding and prevent jams
- Understanding and timing of Remington 870 cartridge stops
- Checking and adjusting "range" on Smith & Wesson revolvers
- Troubleshooting ejection problems on Browning A-5 shotguns
- How a gas system works on a Colt AR-15
- AR-7 trigger repairs
- Secrets of fast and easy gun repair!
- Exclusive teaching method demonstrated in proven video format that makes learning a snap and much more...

Your FREE video will come with a complete information package on how to get started in gunsmithing FAST. President's Guarantee: I am so confident you will learn how to become a gunsmith by watching this FREE video, that I will give you a $10 gift certificate good towards an AGI video of your choice when you order this package. Sincerely, Gene Kelly, President, American Gunsmithing Institute.

.357 SIG

This cartridge is based upon the .40 S&W case, simply necked down with a short neck and a sharp shoulder. The design purpose was to achieve .357 Magnum revolver ballistics from typical semi-automatic pistols. This cartridge design offers several potential advantages. First, its compact nature allows use of a smaller (shorter) grip frame in pistols so chambered. Second, compared to the parent cartridge, the .357 SIG can effectively launch lighter bullets at greater velocity to achieve similar muzzle energy with less recoil. The .357 SIG is loaded to a comparatively high pressure level—the same as top factory .357 Magnum loads and 14 percent higher than the .40 S&W or the 9mm Luger. The combination of high pressure, reasonable case capacity, and no barrel venting (as seen in .357 Magnum revolvers) allows this petite cartridge to generate significant ballistics—fully the equal of the .40 S&W in terms of muzzle energy. However, in the typical short pistol barrels used, there is a price to pay for this level of performance—muzzle blast is significant. GDTM

Part of Kimber's 2015 Summer Collection, the Diamond Ultra II and Stainless II Classic Engraved Edition are sleek, sophisticated and shoot with nail-driving accuracy.

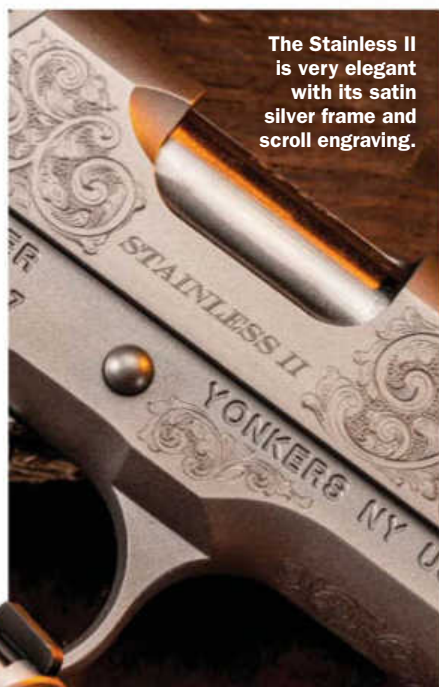

DICK JONES

When the editor asked me to do this review, I had no idea which Kimber pistols I'd be shooting. When The Gun Shop, my FFL, called me to come and pick up the guns, Gary said, "I have a couple of barbeque guns for you." Until recently, I had no idea of the concept of the barbeque gun. According to the Urban Dictionary, a barbeque gun is: "An old term from the Southwest that refers to a gun that is not worn daily. These were functional guns (heavily modified for better accuracy/reliability/etc.) that might have some custom engraving, polishing, or custom grips. They were normally worn in tooled leather holsters as opposed to daily wear holsters—which were plain." The human equivalent is a James Bond version of a handgun, capable of generating serious mayhem, but fitting into the most sophisticated setting with ease and grace.

The current most popular basis for the barbeque gun is the ubiquitous 1911. In earlier days, Colt Pythons and Smith and Wesson Combat Magnums were popular for this kind of adornment, but now the 1911 rules. This is only logical since the 1911 in .45 ACP is both powerful and reliable, and the techniques for making it extremely accurate while maintaining reliability have been around for years. Due to its storied history, the 1911 has a certain level of grace, and the classic design offers ample opportunity for adornment.

For Kimber America, it was a logical jump to begin making visually enhanced 1911s because they're the largest manufacturer of 1911s in the world, and they have a loyal following of discriminating owners. Kimber also has a reputation for reliable and accurate guns. Whether there was an intentional decision at Kimber or the company just decided to dress things up a bit isn't known, but it's a perfect fit. The whole idea of the barbeque gun is that it not only be visually enhanced; it must also be a seriously accurate gun, capable of performance well beyond a standard off-the-shelf handgun. Traditionally, this class of gun has been a custom gun built by a well-known 1911 tuner, but a few manufacturers are breaking into the category.

When I opened the cases and saw the Diamond Ultra II and Stainless II Classic Engraved Edition, I instantly understood the concept of the barbeque gun. Both guns have been introduced this summer and are part of Kimber's 2015 Summer Collection. The Diamond Ultra II is a concealed carry, 3-inch barreled, officer's grip gun. As is normal for 3-inch 1911s, it uses the bushing-less barrel system and a full-length guide rod. The frame is aluminum for reduced weight and has a satin silver finish. There are ball-milled grooves in the front strap and straight mainspring housing.

The slide, grip safety, hammer, magazine release, ambidextrous thumb safety and slide release are high-polish stainless steel. The polish is so high my original thought was it was chrome. There's border engraving on the slide with scroll corners, similar to the engraving on older classic American shotguns. The grip panels are ball-milled aluminum with flush-fit hollow head screws. Sights are Tactical Wedge night sights. The solid match-grade trigger comes from the factory at 4.9 pounds on my test gun, about right for a defensive handgun. It broke crisp and clean and has adjustable backlash.

Shooting the Diamond Ultra reminds you that 25-ounce 1911s with high-potency defensive loads generate recoil. The recoil isn't as uncomfortable as a lightweight .357 revolver, but it does deflect the gun upwards regardless of how tightly you hold it. I shot it with Lake City Match hardball, Black Hills 230-grain FMJ as well as Remington Golden Saber 185-grain hollow points. As an additional function test, I used some low-powered reloads with Blue Boy coated 200-grain bullets. Operation was flawless and accuracy was good. I would have preferred grips with a more aggressive texture; the ball-milled aluminum grips were just not rough enough for me to keep the gun as anchored in my hands as I would have liked. The sights were spot on as shipped, and it was easy to keep rapid shots in the A zone of a USPSA target at 10 yards. Repeat shots were a bit slower, but running the 8-inch plates within the standard time was certainly doable from the low-ready firing position. My only other complaint was that the polishing that provided the super-high-sheen finish must have rounded the slide serrations a bit, and 3-inch 1911s are already noticeably stiff when racking the slide.

The Diamond Ultra isn't a ladies gun, unless the lady has a very strong grip.

The Stainless II Classic Engraved Edition is a full-sized 1911 with a satin silver slide and frame. The slide has both front and rear serrations, and the flat sides and the top are scroll engraved in an open vine scroll pattern. The frame is engraved forward of the slide release, around the magazine release, on the flat mainspring housing and on the right side opposite the safety.

The engraving is much more attractive than the roll-stamped engraving I've seen on a lot of shotguns. I know it isn't hand engraved; the engraving cost would surpass the price of the gun, but it's very close in appearance and sparkles in the light, contrasting the flat finish of the frame and slide. It's very attractive.

There's a beavertail grip safety but no enhanced bottom bump for thin hands. Sights are fixed, low profile with no dots. The skeletonized trigger on my test gun broke crisp and clean at 4.0 pounds and is backlash adjustable. The gun also features two-toned smooth walnut grips with Ivory Micarta checkered inlays, which represent one of the most striking features on the Stainless II.

Shooting the Stainless II Classic is like spending time with an old friend. The trigger is good; the sights are easy to see and are the traditional plain black sights I prefer. The checkering on the Ivory Micarta inserts provides a good purchase, and the 38-ounce weight tames things down to normal levels. Accuracy was spot on with my first shot at 10 yards, taking out the A in the A zone of the target. Recovery is fast with the added weight going a long way to reconcile the recoil issue, and the longer and more textured grip provides a solid purchase. This isn't a target or race gun, but it's way beyond the average for 1911s and as tough and reliable as a King Ranch diesel pickup truck to boot.

While I'll admit I've never attended a Southwest barbeque that involved barbeque guns, I suspect such a soiree might also include a little friendly shooting competition. My favorite version of this is nail driving, and the Stainless II Classic could certainly perform the task. My adopted son, Chris Cerino, drove nails with a Colt Police Positive in the first Top Shot series, and he inspired me to get into nail driving and fly shooting. When a fly lights on a target in my classes, I stop the proceedings to demonstrate deliberate shooting accuracy by shooting the fly. I can get the fly almost all the time at 5 yards, and have a good average at 10. I can easily imagine a nail driving competition at a good-old-boy western barbeque, and the Stainless II Classic would be a great gun for the task. The .45 ACP round is the perfect caliber for nail driving because it drastically improves your chances over a smaller footprint 9mm or the .38 Chris used. My 10-yard group confirms this with nine shots in a ragged hole and probably five or more that would have pounded a twenty-penny nail through the board.

Bench rest testing of the two guns revealed the accuracy of the Stainless II Classic exceeded the accuracy of the Diamond Ultra, as would be expected. Off the bench at 25 yards, the Classic managed a couple of five-shot groups under 2 inches, doing best with Black Hills full metal jacket 230s. The best single group was with Remington Golden Saber at just less than 1.5 inches center to center.

Bench testing the Diamond Ultra was a bit tougher because of its small size and considerable recoil. I really felt I didn't do it justice, but it still performed with more than adequate accuracy for a defense gun. My very best group was a bit less than 3 inches, but this is excellent accuracy for a small, concealed carry .45.

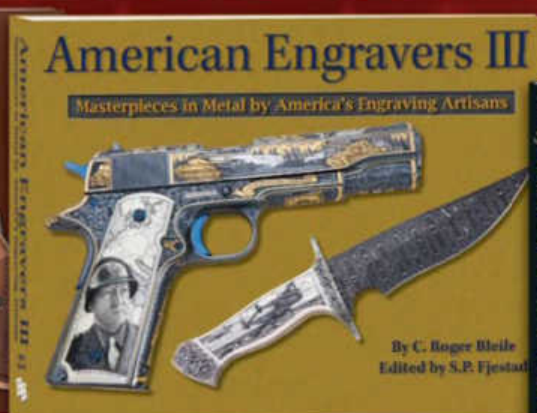

I admit, I've never owned a barbeque gun, and I don't frequent many high-class events. If I did, I certainly wouldn't feel out of place with either of the two Kimbers tested. I like the Stainless II Classic best, and it would certainly be my choice if there were a nail-driving competition as part of the festivities. GDTM

Tactical Guns for Self-Defense

It's kind of a no-brainer to choose a tactical weapon to defend your family and home. These weapons—ARs, pistols and shotguns—have passed the test of time in battlefields and on city streets. Well-made and quality-built guns like these are the type you can depend on when the odds may not be in your favor. Will they give you an advantage in a gunfight? Yep, and there is nothing wrong with that. Here are a few guns I have on my short list that are as suitable for tactical operations as they are for home defense.

WILSON COMBAT VICKERS ELITE

Wilson Combat builds near-perfect 1911s, but when they teamed up with competitive shooter, industry consultant and trainer, Larry Vickers, they may have built the perfect 1911. Starting with Wilson Combat's precision-machined and hand-fitted forged slide and frame along with their match-grade barrel for impeccable reliability and precise accuracy, Vickers added a bobbed high-ride beavertail grip safety, round-butt magazine well and a special .45-caliber magazine. The Vickers Duty Magazine has a reinforced, solid tube for added strength, a newly engineered follower with sand cuts and a last-round retention feature. Pretty darn close to near perfect. H&K VP9

H&K has been a pioneer in developing polymer frame, striker-fired pistols since the 1960s. Its newest is the VP9, and it is one of the most ergonomic pistols available today. The modular grip features two different size backstraps and side panels offering 27 different combinations, so you can custom fit the pistol to your hand and shooting style. Plus, the VP9's controls are ambidextrous. Shoots the black out of targets, too. ($719; HK-USA.com)

RUGER SR-556 TAKEDOWN

Ruger takes tactical covert to new levels of concealment with the SR-556 Takedown, which breaks down into four components without tools. Remove the upper receiver from the lower receiver as you normally would, then remove the bolt carrier from the upper. The barrel can then be removed from the upper receiver by pulling down on two sliding latches, rotating the barrel and pulling it free from the handguard. The disassembled rifle neatly stows in a small knapsack for discreet carry. Plus, you can swap out calibers to .300 BLK with a simple barrel and magazine change. ($2,049; Ruger.com)

Photon XT 6.5x50S

The new SIG Sauer P320 shifts shape and caliber with stunning ease, offering shooters a level of modularity never before seen with pistols.

JIM GRANT

Top-Tier Transformer

If the AR-15 has taught manufacturers anything, it's that Americans love modularity. Hell, people have been customizing cars, shoes and everything under the sun since antiquity. So it's strange that no pistol has been as configurable and customizable as America's favorite black rifle. At least, that was the case, until the recent introduction of SIG Sauer's ultra-modular polymer-framed handgun, the SIG P320.

Skeptics out there are already bemoaning the impossibility of matching the AR-15's countless array of aftermarket parts and ability to change calibers at will. They're not wrong, but SIG is circumventing the limiting nature of pistol designs regarding caliber by redefining what the pistol legally is. As with any firearm, the ATF classifies the serialized part as the de facto firearm. That serialized part cannot be sent directly to an individual's home without a proper FFL.

This is important because for most polymer pistols, shooters wanting a different color grip or a new variation must buy a new handgun. SIG's solution is to create a modular internal frame component consisting of a trigger group and serialized receiver that can accept different grip types, colors and even calibers. Because those parts aren't considered "firearms," they can be sent directly to the shooter's home. SIG even renamed the grip component as a Grip Shell to further distinguish it from the serialized portion.

I know what you're thinking: I mentioned the word "serial" a lot in the previous few paragraphs, and also, the concept of modular Grip Shells sounds familiar.

It should.

SIG introduced this idea back in 2007 with its P250 line of handguns. The major difference between the two is the method of cartridge detonation; the P250 is hammer-fired, while the P320 is striker-fired. The reason SIG made this change is because they found, like so many others, that Americans are now fully accustomed to striker-fired handguns. Between their ever-consistent trigger pull, snagfree internalized design and idiotproof simplicity, these pistols are an easy sell to new shooters and veteran handgunners alike.

The model reviewed is the P320 Compact. It differs from the full-sized model in three regards: It has a smaller grip shell, shorter slide/barrel and takes reduced capacity magazines. However, the Compact's grip shell still accepts full-sized magazines and even the full-length slide assembly. Alternatively, the full-sized barrel can be installed in a compact frame, but it protrudes out past the end of the frame.

The obvious advantage of this modularity is for shooters who want to buy a carry pistol that can also be converted into a full-sized bedside gun or competition handgun. The less obvious benefit is the translation of skills and muscle memory from range plinker to carry gun. Most people don't get enough trigger time on their concealed carry pistol to be as effective as possible in a life or death situation. The reasons are many, but for most it boils down to carry guns being unpleasant to fire. They choose something too powerful, too compact or both. The P320 alleviates this by making the choice less permanent. Shooters who bought the P320 Subcompact in .357 SIG can change their pistol's configuration to a compact model in 9mm Parabellum if the recoil and cost of .357 SIG is too great.

Another benefit of the interchangeable Grip Shell system is it also takes pressure off new shooters looking for a first pistol. Many newbies don't yet understand what constitutes a properly fitting handgun, but after weeks or months of shooting experience, they may find their chosen handgun could be better. Now, these shooters can purchase additional Grip Shell sizes as their taste matures.

The author was able to fire the P320 with a SilencerCo Osprey 45 suppressor and found it to be a nice pairing. Author Photo

For example, I'm a small-handed shooter, and my first handgun was a second generation Glock 17—basically a polymer 2x4. After thousands of rounds downrange, I became proficient with the handgun and learned to work around the ill-fitting grip, but I could have been much better served with a thinner or smaller-gripped pistol. With the small diameter grip on the P320, even my petite wife can reach every control on the pistol without shifting her grip—something she can't even do on a 1911.

The number of controls on the P320 is also very limited. There are four controls on the entire firearm: the trigger, magazine release, slide stop and disassembly lever. Notice the lack of external safety on the handgun. To the uninformed, this may seem like a recipe for disaster, but truthfully it shows SIG understands what combat or concealed carry pistols need most. Simplicity.

Changing between calibers is easy with the P320's Grip Shell system. The shooter essentially gets four calibers within one firearm. Author Photo

Lethal force experts like Massad Ayoob speak at length on tachycardia and the resulting loss of fine motor skills during firefights. With a shooter's heart beating loud enough they can't hear their surroundings, the last thing an adrenaline-fueled, shaky-handed defender needs is to mess with a safety lever.

Self-defense theory and tactics aside, the P320 lives up to SIG's reputation for creating solid, dependable handguns without compromise. In testing, the P320 Compact was shot with all frames and two variations of magazines (full and compact length) and ran without issue across 600 rounds of various ammo types. This included Hornady TAP, Wolf, Tula Brown Bear, Winchester White Box, Winchester +P NATO spec and even some Buffalo Bore rounds.

Additionally, since SIG was kind enough to include their P320 Compact Conversion Kit, I ran all the variations of barrel and slide assemblies possible and never managed to cause the pistol to malfunction. I even had a chance to run the P320 Compact with an extended, threaded barrel topped with a SilencerCo Osprey 45 sound suppressor. Surprisingly, the SIG made an excellent host—not simply because of its great ergonomics and stellar reliability, but also due to its reduced weight. This is surprising because I was initially concerned the light heft of the P320 Compact would balance strangely with the oversized suppressor. In reality, the handgun's insubstantial mass helped counter the added heft of the can, making for a quick-shooting, fast-pointing dynamic duo.

Accuracy from the P320 is on par with other handguns of the same size, performing better than most shooters can manage. The fixed sights were thankfully dead on from the factory and—much to the delight of defensive-minded shooters—are photoluminescent for fast sight acquisition in low-light settings.

The pistol ships with a kydex holster, two 13-round Mec-Gar magazines and a fitted polymer carrying case. Additional Grip Shells, holsters, magazines, barrels and other accessories can be purchased either directly from SIG or other resellers. The P320 Compact retails for between $628-$713 depending on configuration and package. Additional Grip Shells run a little under $50, which is significantly less expensive than a new pistol.

With an MSRP under $700 and street prices even lower, the SIG P320 is one of the least expensive ways to get a high quality SIG pistol. Add to this its ability to incorporate different frames, calibers and colors, and shooters get an ultra-modular pistol from a trusted manufacturer with decades of experience building combat-ready pistols. Shooters torn between various sizes and capacities of pistols can't find a better solution to their pistol woes than the SIG P320 Compact. GDTM

7 Common Training Myths

There are many myths out there when it comes to proper training technique. Here, seven of the most common debunked.

BOB WHALEY

When I was asked to write a column on seven training myths I have experienced during my career, I thought it would be easy. I was wrong! You see I've been lucky throughout the years in the instructors with whom I have crossed paths. With only a few exceptions, the instructors I've gravitated toward presented valid information that has repeatedly stood the test of real-world time. So, I had to pull up information from those "few exceptions" to come up with the myths. I realize one man's myth is another man's truth. Your ideas and experiences may be different, but the information presented here is based on my training and experience collected over the last 37 plus years. Well, anyway, here goes nothing.

1 YOU WON'T USE YOUR SIGHTS IN A GUN FIGHT

I know; we have study after study, reams of empirical evidence and the commentary of really smart folks that say you will not use your sights under stress (Oh Lord, I hate that word). Most of the studies are based either on simulated gunfights under laboratory conditions or interviews with individuals involved in gunfights. In the case of the former, no simulation, no matter how carefully constructed, can exactly re-construct what occurs in real life. More on that later. In the latter case, I've read lots of studies based on participant interviews, and with those supporting the "won't-use-your-sights" theory, one thing always jumps out at me. We will accept that an individual will perform any number of actions without conscious thought as a result of deeply ingrained training leading to unconscious competence. When, however, that same participant expresses any doubt about using the sights—an action they have performed literally thousands of times—the researcher will immediately conclude the sights were not utilized. If you accept that the shooter performs various actions due to ingrained training, why do we discount that phenomenon when it comes to using the sights? Could it be that the shooter used the sights and just didn't register the action because it was so ingrained he performed it without conscious thought?

Myths, such as the one about using your sights in a defensive scenario, are common but should be dispelled by competent instructors.

Well, I've done my own study. Thirty years of police work with 15 years on my department's full-time SWAT team and (wait for it) two shootings. I know two is not a big number, but it's a whole lot more than most of the researchers have experienced! And I used my sights in both instances. Friends of mine who have preformed well in shootings will say they performed well because they used their sights. We used our sights because we trained with outstanding instructors who demanded excellence. Then we obtained the experience to remain calm under pressure.

I will add one more thought on the use of sights in a gunfight. If you disregard your sighting system (iron sights, red dot or visible laser) and fixate on your target, you will most likely miss. I trained in instinct/un-sighted/reflexive fire throughout the years, and it is impressive on a static range. History has shown, however, that unsighted fire leads to failure in actual shootings. Remember, the universal hit rate is 100 percent. A hundred percent of the time you launch a projectile down range, you will hit something. Using the sights gives you the best chance of hitting your intended target and solving your problem. Fixating on the threat and blowing rounds somewhere down there ensures you'll likely miss your intended target and hit an unintended target. That unintended target may be an inanimate object or a 4-year-old child. It's your choice. Ensure success or accept failure.

2 FORCE-ON-FORCE TRAINING IS JUST LIKE THE REAL THING

No. Nope. No way! Don't get me wrong. Force-on-force training is a vital category of training and, if done right, can give you a low-level base of experience—the final level of training. But force-on-force is not “exactly like real life.” How do I know? Remember those two shootings?

First, force-on-force training should be carefully constructed to validate training presented in the class. The training should provide you with all the answers. All you need to do is figure out the question during the exercise. Next, the best exercises are based on real world events, not the instructor's imagination. Last, the instructor should not allow the exercise to descend to the level of a paintball game or allow the students to “stress out” (Man, I hate that word). Exercises should be carefully controlled so the student achieves all the needed training goals. But, to be clear, force-on-force is not “just like real life.”

Your training is what you'll fall back on in a defensive situation. Make sure you've trained to a high level.

3 YOU WILL RISE TO THE OCCASION

In fact, you will default to your level of training. Further, in a real event, your skills will likely deteriorate, at least in the initial encounter. You must have highly developed physical and mental skills to perform at a level that will ensure success. A fighting or combat mindset without the skills to back up that mindset is useless. Mind-set alone is “talking the talk.” Developing skills to back up your mindset is “walking the walk.” You have to have both. So many people in the defensive weapon craft community want to take short cuts in training. Go ahead, it’s only life and death. What is your life worth to you? Put in the work, and you won’t have to rise to the occasion. The occasion will have to rise to your level of competence, and you will have won before the fight even begins.

4 IT’S NATURAL/INSTINCTIVE

This comment is usually attached to the instructor’s favorite technique, position or method of performing a given act. With the exception of natural point of aim, there’s nothing about using a gun that’s instinctive or natural. It’s learned behavior. You either learned it in a class, saw it on TV, heard someone talking about whatever it is you think came natural or you learned it by some other means. How do I know? I know because I make pretty good money teaching fighting arts, including use of a variety of firearms. If this activity was natural or instinctive, anyone of any age could shoot. They wouldn’t need to be taught; they would instinctively know what to do. It would be truly hardwired behavior. Ask yourself: Did you know how to shoot before someone taught you? Of course not!

Shooting is learned behavior. You will learn, accept and perform what you believe is relevant to you and what you believe is valid. An instructor that explains everything by saying a given action is natural/instinctive either doesn’t know what he’s talking about or is too lazy to explain his training program. Either way, he’s shortchanging the student. The technique may be perfectly valid. But it’s learned behavior. Find an instructor who knows how to teach.

5 EVERYONE DOES THIS (INSERT INSTRUCTOR’S FAVORITE TECHNIQUE)

There are no universal actions in response to stimuli of any kind. How we react/respond is based on our individual experiences, training/education and perceptions. A couple examples come to mind.

Years ago, there was this popular idea that—when surprised—everyone would crouch down and square up to the perceived threat. Remember that thing about me being assigned to a full-time SWAT team for over 15 years? Well, my buddies and I thought about that. Want to see someone surprised? Knock down their door and burst through pointing guns at them, throwing flash bangs and yelling to get on the ground. Then you see what people really do when startled. Freeze in place, turn and run, assume a fetal position (lying, sitting or standing no less) but very few squared up to us because those were the ones that got launched, and very few got launched! Most people, after an initial shock, followed directions. The reactions to our induced shock were individual. Nobody did the same thing as the last guy.

The second example is the universal startle reflex, i.e. throwing up their hands in response to sudden stimuli. Ummm, ever been hit in the face by a fist, pillow, ball etc? Hands didn’t come up, eh? Let that happen enough, and you’ll get those hands up. Practice it enough, and throwing your hands up in a startle response indeed becomes ingrained. It can become ingrained to the point you may just do that instead of what is really needed in the moment like moving, going directly to your gun or deflecting an incoming punch or gun pointing at you.

You can build similar actions among a training population. That can be good or bad based on the nature of the instruction. Responses have to be based on the circumstances of the event. Broad-based skills are important, but you must be able to remain calm enough to select the right tool for the job. If you buy into the universal action myth, you may just find the universal action you had to be taught anyway doesn’t fit your problem. That means you’ve wasted time, and time is a commodity you don’t have in a life or death situation.

O.K., I admit, I’m a horrible person. I wanted to test this theory, so I used my 3-year-old granddaughter as a guinea pig. I took a sponge ball (not a baseball, so I guess I’m not too bad) and tossed it at her head. In response to that stimulus, she did not, in fact, perform a universal action of lifting her hands to protect her head. In fact, the sponge ball bounced off her head. She thought that was hilarious! It was a sponge ball! After several attempts and Pawpaw showing her how to get her hands up, she’s starting to get pretty good at getting her hands on the ball. Catching will come. She had to learn how to lift her hands to protect her head.

6 HEART RATE DETERMINES YOUR ABILITY TO PERFORM PHYSICAL ACTIONS

Ok, here's an admission. Nothing I've stated so far is my original idea. I have read comments and counter comments to virtually all the myths presented here and compared the credentials of the commenters. Heck, bouncing the sponge ball (come on, it was just a sponge ball) off the granddaughter's head wasn't even my idea! So when this myth came up years ago, I was curious if it had validity. I talked to doctors and a variety of trainers who both did and did not agree with the concept. The trainers were split just about 50/50 for and against the concept. The doctors, who included sports medicine specialists and cardiologists, all said the concept was without merit. I deferred to the docs, and this myth has pretty much been de-bunked over time.

The docs all indicated the same thing. If your heart beats too slow or too fast, it eventually stops working. Not good! That's the only effect your heart has on performance. As long as your heart beats within a range that doesn't adversely affect your health—in other words you die—you can pretty much do whatever you have trained to do. Pretty simple actually.

Virtually no aspect of shooting is instinctive or natural. Only training will ensure you act appropriately in the situation.

7 EVERYONE RESPONDS TO STRESS IN THE SAME WAY

Stress—Oh Lord, I really hate that word! This myth relates to myth #5 in that the proponents of this myth advance the idea that everyone will experience the same effects under stress (Oh Lord, oh Lord, I really, really hate that word).

Brought to you by a wild gang of winds, winters, sun and storms.

This is no land of milk and honey. Only hard work and a harder ass will save you here. This place mirrors our own exacting standards. We spend more time criticizing our ammo than making it. Every round undergoes harsh scrutiny, by hand. That's after we've already hand inspected everything that went into making it. Only what's flawless passes. Unforgiving? You betcha.

www.black-hills.com | 605 348 5150

First of all, we all do not perceive the same things as stressful. Some folks can sleep soundly through the craziest of circumstances while others fall apart if their mail is late. Beyond perception, we are all wired differently in relation to our individual ability to manage stressful situations. Training and experience can help us manage critical incidents more efficiently, but on a virtual cellular level, some folks will just always do better than others in these situations.

Why do I hate the word stress so much? It's a perfectly good word. It's only six letters. It's easy to spell. And it's also so overused it has virtually no meaning left. Everything is stressful to someone. There's no way we can say that any of us have universal responses to stress. Folks, simply put this one out of your mind. Might you be excited in a shooting? Yep. Might you wet your pants? Yep. Might you stand there and sling lead like you've done it everyday of your life and it's a perfectly normal part of you day? Yep. And you won't know exactly how you're going to react in that situation until you've been there.

So, there they are. Seven myths I've encountered in my many years of training and engaging in the defensive application of firearms. Some are the result of well-meaning individuals attempting to explain something they just did not really understand or because they didn't have the skills necessary to investigate the issue. Others have come about because someone was simply trying to differentiate his training program from another instructor's. Either way, they are myths that absolutely get in the way of training proven over time in the hands of competent operators. If anything, I hope this information can help you avoid these myths and keep you from wasting your limited training time and money on non-productive concepts. GDTM

Keep Calm and Carry One

The Ithaca Carry 1911

The Ithaca Standard 1911

Between 1942 and 1945, Ithaca made 382,000 of the .45 caliber Model 1911A1 pistols for the U.S. military. In 2010 Ithaca introduced our modern, precision manufactured version of the venerable 1911 utilizing state of the art CNC processes.

Based on the success of that release, Ithaca is proud to offer our Carry version of the 1911. This pistol comes standard with a full sized grip and a 4.25" barrel and the same excellent quality and accuracy offered by every all-American made Ithaca firearm.

We are proud that our firearms are built by Ithaca's dedicated employees in Ohio, with the final assembly done by true gunsmiths who love guns as much as you do. Call 419-294-4113 to discuss how Ithaca can build one of the worlds finest 1911's just for you.

EASTERN IMPORT

Manufactured in Slovakia, the Grand Power K100 Mk12 is a high-quality polymer pistol import with an innovative design offering tons of performance for the money.

DOUG LARSON

If you think a handgun made in Eastern Europe is going to be of low quality and have a rough finish, you haven't seen the Grand Power K100 Mk12 imported by Eagle Imports. The pistol's interesting design and action, while not revolutionary, have some serious benefits not found on many other higher priced guns. While currently used by some foreign government agencies, the K100 and its siblings are also catching on here in the U.S. among competitors and people interested in self defense.

Disassembly for cleaning is simple. While holding the disassembly latch down, pull the slide back and lift at the rear.

Then carefully allow the slide to move forward and separate it from the frame.

Next, remove the recoil spring from the guide rod.

Finally, separate the barrel from the slide.

Although this polymer-framed gun has a steel slide and barrel that are common today, the action is not. Instead of a tilt-barrel, modified Browning design, it uses a rotating barrel, which helps make shooting the gun easier. While recoil is perceived differently by shooters, I found it to be quite a bit less compared to other guns in the same chambering and of similar size and weight boasting of reduced felt recoil. The test gun also proved to be quite a bit more accurate than many other guns of similar size I have tested.

Unlike many currently produced pistols, this one does not have a barrel with a link that swivels on a pin, or an under-lug that rides on a camming surface to tilt the rear of the barrel down to unlock it from the slide. Instead, unlocking occurs when, under recoil, the barrel rotates, which disengages a lug on the barrel from a channel in the slide. The bore axis remains in the same orientation to the slide and frame, which allows the barrel to be set slightly lower in the frame, putting it closer to the shooter's hand. This in turn reduces the recoil's leverage on the shooter's wrist and makes it easier to control muzzle flip. As a result, the sights get back on target faster and recoil feels less.

The comfort factor is important but is highly subjective, and what may be comfortable to one may not be for others. However, with four interchangeable backstraps of different sizes, it is likely the K100's grip size can be adjusted to suit most anyone. And it is easy to do. Just pry the backstrap off and snap on a replacement.

Another notable feature of the K100 Mk12 is that controls really are ambidextrous. An identical but reversed thumb safety, slide catch and magazine release are located on both sides of the gun. The only thing that isn't ambidextrous is the ejection port, but on a handgun, that is generally of no consequence.

Although two different trigger pulls must be mastered with the K100, the test gun's trigger had a very smooth, consistent pull of about 10 pounds in the double-action mode, and when in single-action mode, it broke cleanly without any creep at about 5 pounds after a small amount of take-up. There was no perceived overtravel, and reset was distinct. The trigger has a grooved surface to reduce slippage and was comfortable over long periods of shooting.

The K100 is equipped with a firing pin block drop safety. Not until the trigger is pulled does the firing pin block dis-engage and allow the firing pin to be driven forward by the hammer and strike the primer. The purpose of the design, according to many, is to keep the firing pin from being driven forward if the gun is dropped on the muzzle or the hammer, which has caused unintentional discharges on some pistols without the feature.

The thumb safety is large enough I was able to manipulate it with the thumb of the firing hand without modifying my shooting grip. The slide catch was also easy to engage, and the ambidextrous magazine release could be activated with either the thumb or trigger finger. When pressed, the magazine dropped freely away from the gun.

Sights on the K100 Mk12 consist of a drift adjustable rear sight with two white dots and a pinned front sight with one white dot. The gun is sighted at the factory, and Grand Power thoughtfully provided two extra front sights of different heights with the test gun in case the sight elevation needed adjustment. That's a nice feature not many manufacturers include.

The slide, instead of having the uninspired square, blocky appearance so common today, has seven sides giving it an almost curved profile when viewed from the rear. It is made of 34CrNiMo6 steel, is very nicely machined, polished and finished in a black nitride salt bath that leaves a very hard and corrosion resistant surface. All edges are nicely beveled; the ejection port is large, and there are deep serrations at the front and rear of the slide that offer a solid grip for cycling by hand. The barrel and the frame insert on which the slide rides are made of steel, and while the insert is nitrided with a black finish, the barrel is left in the white and is highly polished. Traditional land and groove rifling is used.

The frame has a Picatinny-style rail on the dust cover that allows for attachment of a light or laser, and the front of the trigger guard is squared and serrated for those who still like to grasp it with the fingers of the support hand. The front strap is grooved, and most of the rest of the grip has a light stippled texture. There is a slight flare to the magazine well to encourage fast reloads.

Field stripping for cleaning is straightforward. After making absolutely sure the gun is unloaded, the disassembly latch—referred to in the manual as the dismantling segment—located just above the front of the trigger guard is pulled down while at the same time the slide is pulled all the way back. At the end of the travel, the rear of the slide is lifted off the frame and then the slide is carefully moved toward the muzzle where it is then separated from the frame. This must be done carefully so the slide does not slip from the hand and get launched under spring pressure. Then the barrel can be separated from the slide and the recoil spring removed from the spring guide, which remains attached to the frame.

Now, assembly, as is commonly said, is in reverse order. But, read the manual first because the barrel must be oriented correctly or the parts won't fit.

The K100 Mk12 proved to be quick back on target due to low muzzle flip and felt recoil. It was also very accurate when test fired off a bench at 25 yards. (Doug Larson photo)

Bullet weight measured in grains, velocity in feet per second 15 feet from the muzzle by chronograph, and accuracy in inches for three five-shot groups at 25 yards.

Also, some people may have difficulty at this point because pulling the slide to the rear against the force of the recoil spring while simultaneously holding onto the frame and pulling the dismantling segment down can be a challenge.

The gun is supplied in a hard carrying case with two 15-round magazines, a bore cleaning brush and the four backstraps mentioned earlier. The extra front sights of different heights as referred to above are also available. Real world retail prices are significantly less than the manufacturer's suggested price, so there is a lot of gun here for the money. For more information, contact Eagle Imports. EagleImportsInc.com. CDTM

Jeff Cooper elevated the gun and its application to true martial art status

RICHARD MANN

Although you may have never considered it, the use of the defensive handgun is a martial art. Martial arts are the codified systems and traditions of combat practices. The term is derived from Latin and means “arts of Mars,” the Roman god of war. The handgun evolved into a true fighting tool about the time of the American Civil War, but it would be another hundred years before anyone truly elevated its application to true martial art status. That man was Jeff Cooper.

Jeff Cooper was a Stanford graduate and a Marine Corps officer who served in WWII and in the Korean War. Between 1957 and 1976, Cooper began writing for Guns & Ammo magazine and started handgun competitions at Big Bear Lake in California. An intellectual and studious man, Cooper began to study the methods of shooting a handgun. He eventually codified its combat application in what is known as the Modern Technique of the Pistol.

Cooper's observations were very pragmatic and at the time revolutionary. He was soon invited to teach his techniques all over the world. It started in Guatemala for the bodyguards of the newly elected President and continued in El Salvador, Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, South Africa and Rhodesia. Cooper became the professor of the art of weaponry, and his contributions are many.

His book, “The Principles of Personal Defense,” was the forerunner to the Cooper Color Code, a system that has become the standard for teaching mental conditioning as it relates to individual combat. He established the four basic rules of firearm safety, which are taught worldwide. And, he coined the acronym DVC. In Latin, this stands for diligentia, vis, celeritas. Translated it means, accuracy, power and speed—a triangular relationship that must be balanced by every pistol shooter.

This triangular concept was the foundation of the International Practical Shooting Confederation (IPSC), which was established in 1976. Cooper was the first president of IPSC, and it became the governing body of practical pistol competition all over the world. IPSC was also the forerunner and guiding light for all of the modern, dynamic combat-type shooting competitions like IDPA and 3 Gun. Without Cooper, it's questionable if any of these would exist.

Regardless of the level of instruction you want to receive, Gunsite Academy can accommodate. They have what seems like an endless pool of talented instructors with experience in all facets of the firearm.

But Cooper did not stop there. In 1976, he also established the American Pistol Institute (API) at what he called his Gunsite Ranch in Paulden, Arizona. Instituted to allow students to travel to Cooper as opposed to him traveling to them, API was created on the principle of another Cooper triangle: the Combat Triad. The Combat Triad is the equilibrium of mind-set, gun handling and marksmanship needed to employ a handgun effectively in a defensive situation.

You might say that Cooper was the prophet of shooting, a sensei of the martial art of firearm combatives, the guru of guns. A very important element of all Cooper's work related to firearms training was that his school was intended to educate the citizen. Sure, soldiers, sailors and police officers were welcome to attend, but Cooper strongly believed that, as Robert

Heinlein put it, "An armed society is a polite society."

Cooper continued to live on the ranch at API, which became Gunsite, until his death in 2006. His contributions to the application of the firearm are legion and were brought about by observing, learning, experimenting and then codifying what worked. Every year, Gunsite Academy continues to expose thousands of students of good character to the Cooper doctrine. Those interested in perfecting the martial art of the pistol should attend what many consider to be the preeminent introductory course to the defensive handgun: the Gunsite Academy 250 Pistol Class.

The 250 Pistol Class is designed to take a student who's never fired a handgun and prepare them to defend themselves with it while engaged in a violent encounter. Students are grounded in Cooper's Modern Technique of the Pistol, which is based on the Weaver stance, proper handgun presentation, the flash sight picture and the compressed surprised break, all with a heavy-duty pistol. They will also be conditioned to the elements of the Combat Triad and DVC.

This is a five-day course during which you will fire in excess of 1,000 rounds from your handgun. You will learn how to shoot a pistol. You will learn if your pistol works. You will learn to perform under stress, how to manipulate your pistol, how to move with a pistol, how to utilize cover and concealment, how to shoot in low light and how to use a flashlight. And, how you think about defensive handguns and street survival will change.

When you walk through the Gunsite gate, leaving as a graduate of the 250 Pistol class, you will have a renewed peace of mind. You will be stronger, more alert and conditioned to respond instantly to any threat. You will believe you can prevail in any encounter, and you will have the skills to do so.

You can read all of the books you like, watch all the DVDs and YouTube videos you want and even attend other handgun training courses. You'll learn something, but will it be the something that saves your life?

I've often said, "The farther you get from Gunsite, the less faith you can have in your training." This is not meant to defame or degrade other schools; there are lots of talented instructors out there, and many worked under Cooper or trained at Gunsite. What I mean by this statement is that if you want to get the message, the unpolluted sermon, the time-proven truth, go to the source. Cooper's Gunsite Academy is the oldest civilian firearms training school in the world. They've been at it for 40 years. You don't do that by doing something wrong.

Now you know who Cooper was, but to really appreciate his contributions and to understand their importance, you must make the trek to Gunsite Academy. The staff there still teaches as though Cooper is watching over their shoulders, and the message is clearly Cooper.

Jeff Cooper was the founding father of the martial art of the firearm. GDM

Richard Mann has attended numerous Gunsite Academy Courses and even worked with Gunsite to establish the laser-integrated version of the 250 Pistol Class. He is also the author of the book, "Handgun Training for Personal Protection," which assimilates Cooper's Modern Technique of the Pistol with modern handgun accessories.

THE GUESSING IS OVER - ACCURATELY MEASURE YOUR WHOLE GUNThe BoreMaster Shotgun Multi-Bore Gauge

Measures .410 to 4 GA Bores, Chokes, Chambers and Barrel Wall Thickness

Price each: $289.95

Barrel Wall Thickness - Never Shoot a Dangerous Gun

One manufacturer's IC is another's skeet or light modified.
Be sure. Don't shoot steel through a too-tight choke.

• Have the chambers been altered? Are they 2" or 2½"?
Are they re-proofed to 2¾"?

Shotgun Combo Gauge

Combination Length of Pull, Drop, Cast and Pitch Gauge Accurate and convenient LOP, drop at comb and heel, cast and angle of pitch gauge. Bold numbers, in metric and inches, are easy to read.

"Gun fit isn't the only thing:

It's everything to the winning competitor."

Price each:
$229.00

Includes 23" Extension and Hold Down Magnet

The Combo Gauge is a "must have" for anyone using fine guns and for setup and repeatability or guns with adjustable combs and pads.
Understanding the simple technicalities of the game brings more pleasure and higher scores - knowledge is power!

GARY REEDER CUSTOM GUNS is proud to introduce our new ALASKAN PACKER. This beauty is built on your Ruger Redhawk frame and features a 6½" vent rib underlug barrel with our normal .002 barrel/cylinder gap. It is chambered in 475 Linebaugh with a beefy 5 shot cylinder. It is also available in several other calibers including 429 GNR, 45 Long Colt, 455 GNR, 454 Casull, 500 Linebaugh, 500 GNR and 510 GNR. It has the interchangeable blade front sight system with the gold bead. It has the full Gunfighter grip with aged ivory Corian grips but grips of your choice are available. It has the satin Vapor Honed stainless steel finish with high polish small parts. It has a full action job, Deep Dish Crown, and Maxi Throat. It is engraved with dangerous Alaskan game. The barrel length, caliber and grips are all up to you. Porting is also available as an option. And just like the name says it is the perfect Alaskan Packer. As usual, one third down and we get to work on your new ALASKAN PACKER

M21-20ga. & 28ga. Standard Grade-Two Barrel Set. Bbl. #1-20ga.-28" bored Full & Mod. Bbl. #2-28ga.-28" bored I.C. & Mod. The 28ga. barrels are the original, early style-"Mid 1930s". "They had no peer for strength and dependability. Carefully fashioned by hand, these barrels today are still the hallmark of excellence and are very scarce. The barrels are raised matted rib with metal bead sights.
"DOUBLE TRIGGERS WITH EJECTORS". The stock is the first early style with long slender pistol grip made only the first few years of production and both barrels have the early style Splinter Forends. L.O.P. 14", Comb 1-9/16", Heel 2-3/8". Being a Standard Grade the checkering pattern is 20 lines per inch Diamond Pattern. It has been completely factory refurbished. This M21 has the classic look which serves as the standard for the Model 21! $18,500.

M21-20ga. Skeet Grade, bbl. #1-28" raised matted rib, bored W.S.-1 & W.S.-2. Non-Automatic Safety, single trigger, select ejectors, pistol grip stock, checkered butt.
L.O.P. 14-5/16" - drop at heel 2-1/2" - comb
1-1/2" - pitch 1-5/8". Skeet finish, inspection finish date Oct. 29, 1948. "A SECOND 410ga.
BARREL WAS ADDED, 28" -3" CHAMBERS BORED W.S.-1 & W.S.-2." All proof & builder's mark are correct and indicates barrel was done at the factory. Condition 99%, and has the old style leather case with all accessories.

A remarkable M21 to say the least from my personal collection. $19,900.

M21-20ga. Two Barrel Set - S.N. 5296. Barrel
#1-28" Full & Mod. Barrel #2-26" W.S. 1
& W.S. 2. Raised matted ribs. Returned to Factory under Repair Order-37890 August 3, 1978. It was completely refurbished and embellished with the second barrel, 21-3 engraving, streamlined the receiver to a "Flatside" also called Full Rounded. The stock has been replaced with the straight style configuration and a Checkered Butt. L.O.P. 14-1/4" Comb 1-1/2" Heel 2-1/2". The initials on the name plate have been changed to G.P., the last owner of this M21. All proof marks and builder's stamps are correct. A very nice older "1935" Factory M21 in 98% condition, Cased.
$12,500.

M62-S.N. 187483-Mfg. 1947-Style Sporting Rifle. 23" round tapered barrel tubular magazine. 22-Short-Long & Long Rifle. The wood if fancy and in new condition. It is engraved with factory pattern #8 with squirrels sitting on tree branches with scrolls on front & rear of receiver. Right side has rabbit sitting on a knoll with scroll work on front & rear of receiver. Engraved by former "Custom Shop Engraver" and signed. An exceptional M62, includes hang tag & M62 take-down manual.
$4,200.
